REPORT
OF
Superintending School Committee
FOR
DISTRICT NO. 1, MARCH 1, 1894.

The schools in this district in the Primary, Intermediate and Grammar grades have been taught by the same teachers with the same success as in former years

The High School has been under the management of Mr. Frederick Serex, a graduate of Boston University, who has labored hard to make the school a success.

The average attendance for the year is approximately as below:

Primary School, Miss J. May Lord, teacher,	54
Intermediate School, Miss Nellie F. Lord, teacher,	35
Grammar School, Mrs. Sarah F. G. Nowell, teacher,	32
High School, Mr. Frederick Serex, teacher,	23

THE SCHOOL BOARD,
OF THE
Town of Rollinsford
FOR THE
YEAR ENDING MARCH 13, 1894.

The School Board of the Town of Rollinsford respectfully present the following report:

The teachers who have been employed to instruct our schools the past year are Miss Celia Y. Ramsdell of South Berwick, Me. the Quamphegan School; Mrs. Etta W. Goodwin of this town, the Sullivan School; Miss Lizzie G. Roberts of this town, the first term of the Rollins School, and Miss Lillian N. Weeden of Somersworth, the remaining two terms; Miss Lillian Weeden the first term of the Turnpike school and Miss Gertrude G. Garvin of this town finished up the year.

These teachers have been earnest in their endeavors, and discharged their duties well. The progress made by the pupils compared favorably with that of any past year. Our teachers seem awake to the importance of teaching their pupils that kind of study which tends rather to develop and discipline the mind than to enlarge the memory alone. It is obvious to every observing person that this method is the only correct one. No other will lead to so wide a sphere of study, or so sure a path to usefulness. That mind previously prepared, which can grasp at, appreciate, reason upon, and master a new and abstruse subject is far in advance on the road to eminence of the one who has cultivated memory alone. The art of teaching the pupil to reason on each subject that occurs, is the only correct way to effect this. The scholar who tries to occupy his mind with too many branches of study at the same time, fails to be able fully to understand any of them, and consequently loses that strength which is necessary to push him on to future conquests. Schools rarely fail to do well, when all concerned are alive and interested for the success of the teacher, for she, as well as others, needs encouragement to stimulate her to greater action and more earnest endeavors. Supine acquiescence in what she performs is not enough, although it is better than faultfinding. There should be an earnest desire, and a constant reaching out, to encourage and help her forward in every possible way, for she may labor ever so assiduously in her arduous calling, and yet accomplish comparatively little. There is a power for good or evil, back of her. If the influence exerted upon our schools by parents and the community generally, is not of the right kind, in vain may she strive to inspire her pupils with any thing like that true scholarly zeal, which is requisite for the best progress. How few realize the fact, that the faithful teacher, true to her trust, without show or noise alone with the children of her charge, exerts a greater influence in the world and has a more potent power to move the destinies of nations, than that of the statesman or the hero, for she moves a lever that moves the world. Most children receive all the education they ever obtain in the common schools, and if the perpetuity of our government, and the strength of the pillars on which it is based, depend on the education of all, rather than the few, then is it not wisdom in the highest degree, to put forth all our power and use every exertion to make these schools what they ought to be, capable of furnishing good education for all.

It is an erroneous and foolish idea, cherished by many, that a child is intellectually profited by taking advanced and complex studies, before first comprehending and thoroughly understanding the rudimentary principles on which all learning is based. What we need in our schools at present, is a better and more practical understanding of the fundamental branches, such a reading, spelling, writing, arithmetic, geography and English grammar. Other, and more advanced studies may be taken when these are fully mastered. The student is not so much inquired of in actual business life, where he has been to school, who has been his teacher, or what he has studied, as what he actually knows, what he has power to bring to bear and make useful in the various duties of life.

This is the kind of education he needs, and without it whatever else he may have studied, he will find himself sadly deficient. But he who has learned the groundwork of an English education, has a surer key in his power to unlock the hidden and inexhaustable stores of science, than he ever can have, who has spent his precious time over what is termed the advanced studies, to the neglect of the rudimental.

In closing we would make a few remarks in relation the Turnpike school. We have noticed for several years past a great irregularity in the attendance of the pupils of this school, and this year have observed the continuation of the same evil. Many of the scholars seem to make it a rule to commence with the term of school and attend a few weeks and then drop off until not more than half of the original number are remaining at the close thereof, and the teacher has only these to give evidence to the work she has done. Such a course is entirely wrong and discouraging to the teacher. Her work is all uphill. Very few persons will long be willing to take charge of a school where so little sympathy is manifested in their work. It is plain where the fault is. The remedy is in the hands of the parents.
